

Addendum to the URGENT message

I sent yesterday's Urgent message because there was so little time for you to use the information I received. After I sent my message yesterday, It was relayed to me by HR that you may subtract locations (officially- decline further consideration) but may not add any locations and any changes requested at this time would not be considered on Thursday. However, changes that have already been made will be taken into consideration.

For those in the conspiracy theory group, the records from the last selections have not been destroyed and will be used again.

There may be some modifications to the facilities for which positions are selected. The original list you made your selections from will be used. If a facility was not able to select due to being a low priority in May and their situation has changed they may be considered for a selection this time. So if you know someone who declined a position and it is not filled now it may have gone to another facility in greater need.

I have added a letter generated by the AFSS Western Service Area on the subject that was forwarded to me as well.

I will be issuing a full update on all those topics of interest to you later.

There is a message being posted concerning a second round of terminal bids by NAATS that has incorrect guidance. To prevent further rumors and propaganda, let's get this straight. There will be some more selections from the FIRST 6,7,8 terminal announcement. HR is NOT planning to another national announcement for terminal 6,7,8 vacancies.

Please advise your personnel that there will be additional terminal 6,7,8 selections made this Thursday in Kansas City. These vacancies will be filled using the same criteria and the same candidates that were used for the first selections. There are about 13 vacancies which were either declined or the individual didn't make the needed clearances.

No changes can be made to employee's bid packages, preferred locations, etc. The selection panel will utilize the original information submitted by the employees.

Please share this with your personnel. NAATS has advised them to contact the phone number and contact from the original bid. This is not true.

No changes will be made to the vacancy applications, therefore telephone calls are not necessary.
